NUMBER 4679. COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO., TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1891. PRICE FIVE CENTS.

A NEW THEATER.

The Colorado Springs Opera House Reopened Last Night.

MAGNIFICENT IMPROVEMENTS.

A Splendidly Arranged Interior with Increased Seating Capacity—Beautiful Decorations—Large Audience to See Boyd's "Midnight Bell."

The new opera house was opened to the public last night. Perhaps some people may take exceptions to the use of the word new in connection with this theater but a visit will convince them that as far as the auditorium goes it is a brand new concern.

THE FOOT PLAY.

As people gave their tickets at the door last night they were ushered, not into a lobby, but into a foyer, separated from the auditorium by curtains of blue and peach colored alternately. These were gracefully looped back and they could look through to the rapidly filling seats.

The floor from this foyer slopes gently down to the orchestra, the "risers" averaging about three inches. The seats run across the house from side to side in segments of a circle of a wide radius so that each seat looks almost straight at the stage. There are 123 seats in the parquet and 312 in the parquet circle.

The old proscenium boxes are still left, but their fronts have been cut back so that a more unobstructed view may be obtained of the stage from the sides. On the lower floor on each side there are, in addition, three "fashion boxes," or loggias, close to the walls. These are semicircular and contain each five chairs, not the ordinary iron affair, but fine specimens of the furniture maker's art, in wicker and carved wood, upholstered with terra cotta and blue plush. The edges of the boxes are surrounded with polished brass railings and they are separated by chains so that, on occasion, all on one side may be thrown into one for a large theatre party.

The stairs to the balcony are on either side of the box office just between it and the old main entrance. The balcony follows the line of the parquet circle and is inclined much more steeply than it was in the old house. The seats do not run around on the side at all but are almost straight back, so that a seat clear to one side commands a view of all parts of the stage. On each side of the gallery floor are four more "fashion boxes," semi-circular like those below and as elegantly furnished. Each box is a little lower than the one next to it and each one commands an excellent stage view. The gallery will accommodate 500 people.

The gallery, or "Garden of the Gods," is larger and better seated than before. Its front extends almost clear across the house and is in a loggia on each side. These are not intended so much for use as boxes as to carry out the decorative plan of the house.

THE DECORATIONS.

The decorations in the opera house are the work of Mr. Ainsworth Brown and they are all in terra cotta, gold and blue with an ivory background. The proscenium arch is in terra cotta and blue with a little gold. The well known portrait of Shakespeare which is over the center, is left with the gilton orchestration about it, but there is absolutely nothing else left of the old paintings. The principal feature of the decorations is the ornamental treatment of the edges of the balcony and boxes. There is a broad band of light blue which runs around the edge and on this are raised gilt figures of flowers, etc. Below this is a band of terra cotta with molding and gilt studs. All the upper boxes project slightly and they are drawn into peaks below. The cove thus made is covered with molded papier mache and painted with crimson flowers and green leaves. The proscenium boxes have heavy terra cotta plush curtains, giving a rich effect. The wall is covered with Bradley paper with a fine gilt figure. On the curved under side of the proscenium the surface has been slightly "clouded" in maize and white, and on this there is a geometrical gilt figure. Along all the balcony and box edges there is a polished brass railing. There is more than a thousand feet of this in the house altogether. All the moldings and high lights in the house have been touched up in gilt. The ceiling still has a cut glass chandelier as a center piece and the ventilator rest in the middle. About this is a great rosette in the prevailing colors. While all this display of color and gilt looks a little garish in the day, by gaslight it looks very well indeed as the colors are softened.

The stage does not look as well now as it will in a few weeks. The retouching of the curtain and scenery is something that it takes a scenic artist to do, and there are none in the west, so the owners are waiting until some man will come along that they can put to work. In the meantime the colors clash a little but people can look anywhere else and find instructive shading of colors.

THE VENTILATION.

Owing to some delays in the adjustment of the new ventilating apparatus, it could not be put into use last night, but the room was still very comfortable. The opera house now has the "plenum" system of ventilation, introduced by Buckham & Co. of Boston. When the interior was rebuilt, a large space was excavated under the floor and made air tight on all sides. [illegible] side of each "riser" is an open space protected by wire gauze, which opens directly into this great air chamber or "plenum." The air is taken from east doors about half way up the north side of the building. A big tube, four by three feet, leads from there down into the basement where a six horse power electric motor operates a fan. This drives the air in and forces it through a coil of steam pipes 1700 feet long into the "plenum," at the rate of 7000 cubic feet a minute. In winter these pipes will be kept hot and the air and floor will thus be warmed. In the "plenum" the air will be under some pressure and will therefore flow steadily out of all the myriad crevices into the room. Neither will there be enough in volume to make a draught, but the grand total will be enough to change all the air every ten minutes and to keep a strong current flowing out of the ventilator on top. Air ducts will lead to the balcony "risers" as well, so people all over the house will breathe equally pure air. Twenty horse power steam boilers is being placed in the basement to warm the air. The electric motor will take its current from the electric railway wires.

THE FURNITURE.

The very comfortable opera chairs made for the house when it was first built have been restored to place as far as they could be and new ones in uniform style purchased to make up the deficiency. The gallery chairs are entirely new and are of bent wood. The carpets are Brussels and are very handsome in color. The were furnished by Wolfner & Wolf, who also furnished the curtains. At each end of the foyer the big mirrors which stood at each side of the proscenium arch in the old house have been placed so that the ladies may be seated that their hats are on straight before going in.

SOME HISTORY.

On Monday evening, April 18, 1881, a little more than ten years ago last night, the Colorado Springs opera house was opened and was filled full. It was then the first theater between the Missouri river and the Pacific coast and it maintained this distinction until the Tabor Grand was opened in Denver. At the opening Maud [illegible] appeared in "Ours," supported by a company from the Sixteenth Street theater in Denver. Between the second and third acts Mr. Hugh A. Dougherty went to the front and made a speech in which he was frequently interrupted by applause. He offered some resolutions which were adopted with three cheers and a tiger. They were as follows:

Resolved, That the cordial thanks of the citizens of Colorado Springs are due to Messrs. Howbert, Humphrey and Crowell for erecting here this beautiful temple dedicated to music and drama; and that their liberality and public spirit eminently entitle them to the grateful respect of their fellow citizens.

Ground was first broken for the opera house in July, 1880. The promoters were Messrs. Irving Howbert, J. E. Humphrey and H. F. Crowell, all old residents of the city and their sole object was to give the citizens of the town an elegant and comfortable place of amusement. The total cost of the opera house was $80,000, of which $20,000 was expended on the theater portion. Mr. A. C. Willard was the architect and every detail of its construction was under his care. No expense was saved, on it. The gallery was surrounded by an iron railing especially cast in New York, bronze figures were made for the lobby in Paris. The scenic painter, Robert Hopkins, was the best in America and for the drop curtain he painted a scene described by Byron among Grecian ruins.

The house was a popular one with the dramatic profession as well as with the public and the names of many celebrated actors have appeared upon its programmes in the last ten years. Among them have been W. T. Sheridan, Lawrence Barrett, Modjeska, Janauschek, Louis James, Marie Wainwright, Thomas Keene, Frederick Warde, Dion Boucicault, Alexander Salvini, Wilson, James O'Neil, J. T. Raymond, Milton Nobles, Charlotte Thompson, Emma Abbott, Mrs. Langtry, Mrs. James Brown Potter, Robert Mantell, Joseph Murphy, The Kiralfys, The Milan Opera company, Maggie Mitchell, Geo. S. Knight, Melissa Bauklin, Effie Ralder, W. J. Florence, Robson and Crane, Ed. Thorn, Lotta, Minnie Maddern, Corinne, Roland Reed, W. J. Scanlan, Rosina Vokes, Minnie Palmer, Fay Templeton, Frank Daniels, J. K. Emmett, Rice, the Boston opera, Clara Morris, El Barrigan and Rose Coghlan. The opera house has echoed the tones of such lecturers as John B. Gough, Henry Ward Beecher, Mrs. Scott-Siddons and Oscar Wilde, and it has echoed the roars of laughter caused by Bill Nye, Mark Twain, James Whitcomb Riley and Josh Billings. Campanini's tenor and Whitney's bass have thrilled its walls, and hosts of other actors, lecturers and singers have entered its stage door.

It has been the place where all large meetings have been held, political and otherwise. The Congregational church held its meetings there for a year and here the graduates of the high school have been yearly launched into life. The one idea of the owners has been to make it a place of amusement for the people and in this they have thoroughly succeeded. They have sought no other profit from it. In all the years they have kept it in first class order they have put just one dollar into the treasury.

A MODEST BOX.

There is no place of amusement in the country that has a brighter future than our opera house. With every new theater built in Denver, Pueblo, Canyon, or elsewhere, and the indications point to high class attractions to come west are in general, Mr. Nye will continue to shine, and by linking this house with Pueblo's grand theater he is resolved to secure many attractions that would not otherwise come. The Silver circuit is become world famous and actors like to have a week spent a day or so at Colorado Springs. During the coming year, among many other attractions, will be presented the following.

The Vokes, W. Keene, Cleveland's Minstrels, Lewis Morrison in "Faust," Evans & Hoey in "A Parlor Match," Frank Daniels in "Little Puck," Tavian Light Opera Company, Kate Claxton, "The Hunchback," Rosina Vokes, "The Golden Dragon" Company, "Von Yonson," "Devil's Auction," "Old Homestead," Katie Clayton, "Dr. Bill," "Skipped by the Tide," "Out of the Moon," Professor Heimann, "Saint McAllister," or "One of the 400," Roland Reed, Grismer & Davies, "U and I," Carleton Opera Company, Maggie Mitchell, Patti Rosa, Little Corinne, "Mr. Wilkinson's Widows," Miss Gale, Dalton & Hart, Effie Ralder, "Rob Roy, Jr.," "Von Dorlacher's Minstrels," "All the Comforts of Home," "Natural Gas" and "Hearts and Hoes."

The same force of courteous ushers will be found in the aisles as of yore. "Curley" Davis will superintend the mechanical department, Frank Johnson will take the tickets at the door and "Haynes" will sell the ice. All of these people have been well trained in their duties and their continuance insures the comfort of the public.

Mr. Nye himself is indefatigable as a manager. He is ever on the outlook for good attractions and often takes great risks to secure some of the best companies. He has given Colorado Springs the best line of attractions of any town on the Silver circuit, while it is not the least of theater towns.

LAST NIGHT'S OPENING.

The audience which occupied the opera house last night, admired the decorations and applauded the comedy, would have filled every chair and left some standing a year ago. As it was, there were no great stretches of empty chairs. The opera boxes were filled with well dressed theater parties and the parquet and circle were just about full. "A Midnight Bell" is a play that appealed to last year and at every one laughing, and those who went again this year did not fail to renew the laugh. Eugene Canfield and George Richards supplied most of the fun and did it well, too. The scenery and in every way the presentation was a success. The owners were all there, and although there were no speeches made, they were warmly congratulated by all whom they met on the complete success of their efforts to give this city a complete, beautiful and comfortable opera house.

Mr. Fitbrook of Denver, who designed the new interior, was present last night and expressed himself as satisfied with his work as shown by the lights. Alderman W. R. Holt, who built the house ten years ago, and who had the contract for the carpenter work of the improvements, could not be present.

Next year the owners contemplate building the stage back to the alley and putting the dressing rooms on the lot north, which they own. The house is wired for electric lights throughout and they will be put in later.

AN ACT OF WAR.

Reported Seizure by Great Britain of a Turkish Town.

EUROPE HOPES IT IS FALSE.

A Report from Constantinople that Causes Great Excitement in Political and Financial Circles—Rumors from Europe from Chile.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—Since the report of the occupation of Mitylene by a British force was received it has been considerable excitement. Up to the hour (5:30 p. m.) there has been no official utterance upon the subject. Reporters and correspondents by the score have called at the foreign office and at the admiralty, but the officials on duty there declined to confirm the report that Great Britain had taken action in the Dardanelles question.

Naturally the fact that foreign officers and admiralty officials only decline to affirm the report gives strength to the report in circulation and the general public consequently is led to believe that there is some truth.

A dispatch has been received from Constantinople stating that the occupation of the island of Mitylene is an accomplished fact and it has found an echo in all the continental bourses. The general opinion seems to be that if the British forces had not landed in the Dardanelles, neither the foreign office nor the admiralty would have delayed denying a rumor calculated to awaken the greatest apprehension in financial and diplomatic circles.

THREATENING TIMES AS SAID.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—An Athens dispatch says Greek consuls at Mitylene and Smyrna have cabled that thirteen British war ships landed troops at Sigri on Friday.

A SERIOUS STORY.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—Late this evening another and still more startling dispatch comes by telegraph from Athens. It is that the Greek consuls at Mitylene and at Smyrna have wired the Greek government that thirteen British men-of-war landed troops and guns at Sigri and that they have already strongly fortified that place.

Lord Salisbury's chief private secretary has returned unexpectedly to London and is busy at the foreign office.

The St. James Gazette says this evening that the startling news concerning the island of Mitylene obviously possesses political significance of the first importance. Continuing, the same paper adds that the island of Mitylene has a position of considerable strength and importance, although possessing little in the way of fortifications.

A SERIOUS MATTER INDEED.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 14.—It is stated that the French and Russian ambassadors here have received telegrams from their respective consuls in Mitylene announcing the occupation of Sigri, and stating that guns have been landed and the island has been surrounded with torpedoes.

THE STORY DISCREDITED.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—The Daily News and the Chronicle do not believe the news of the Sigri seizure.

DID SOMEBODY CONFESS?

LONDON, Sept. 14. An intimation of the intention of the British government to occupy the island giving a point of vantage near the Dardanelles was first heard of in the inner diplomatic circles of Vienna and Berlin soon after Sir William White's audience with the Sultan on Friday last. Nothing about it has yet appeared in European newspapers till the Constantinople story startled the bourse and the public to-day. The reports were at first treated as incredible and are still held to be of doubtful authenticity, or at least unconfirmed. In the absence of a foreign confirmation of the reports and until the details of the action of the British war ships are known the full significance of the movement cannot be revealed.

It can be stated on high authority, however, that Sir William White asked the sultan to assist to the British occupation of some point within striking distance of the straits and offering a good harborage for the fleet. Tenedos and Besikaba were the fleet rendezvous from 1878 to 1878, and have been surveyed recently and were reported to the admiralty favorably. The offer made to the sultan resembled the request which the British government made in 1877 prior to the acquisition of Cyprus to purchase an island near the Dardanelles. This project was longer the subject of negotiations and was abandoned on the signing of the Anglo-Turkish convention in June 1878.

The seizing of Sigri, therefore, cannot have occurred without the connivance of the sultan. An official announcement issued from Constantinople yesterday stated that a complete entente had been arranged between Sir William White and the sultan, but the terms of the restored harmony was not mentioned.

The intimation that seizure of the island would be followed by its fortification is magnified by a Berlin report to night that Lord Salisbury does not contemplate a permanent occupation of the island, but has designed the movement rather as a demonstration to check the Franco-Russian game.

The movement accentuates the diplomatic crisis. Admiral Perkins, in command of the British Mediterranean squadron is about to be replaced by Admiral Tryon, who hoisted his flag in 1887 on the Nile and who sailed from Portsmouth for Gibraltar on Friday to take the command.

UNEASINESS IN PARIS.

PARIS, Sept. 14.—A decided feeling of uneasiness has been caused in diplomatic and financial circles here by the receipt of an alarming dispatch announcing that Sigri on the west coast of the island of Mitylene, an island belonging to Turkey, near the coast of Asia Minor, and within easy steaming distance of the Dardanelles, has been occupied by a detachment of British troops or marines landed there from a British ironclad.

No details have been received and the report lacks confirmation.

The island of Mitylene is within twenty-five miles of the Hellespont, has an area of 270 square miles, and a population of 40,000. It has good harbors and a fertile soil. The principal towns are Mitylene and Molive. Tenedos on the other hand, though occupying a much more advantageous position, being to all intents and purposes at the actual entrance of the Hellespont, is only five miles in length and of a rugged, rocky nature.

Under ordinary circumstances little or no credence could have been placed in this alarming rumor, but coupled with the story broadly circulated on Saturday, that in view of Russia's practical control of Turkey in regard to the passage through the Dardanelles of vessels belonging to her volunteer fleet, Great Britain intended to occupy the island of Tenedos at the entrance to the Hellespont or Dardanelles, more serious attention is paid to this dispatch from Constantinople.

The island of Mitylene, itself, is a most advantageous position from which Great Britain could control the waters of the Hellespont.

A SERIOUS MATTER.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—Notwithstanding the qualified denial by government officials of the reported seizure of a port on the island of Mitylene, public opinion is almost universally to the effect that the situation at the Dardanelles will be met by England with force.

In public places nothing else is talked of, although it is not believed that either Turkey or Russia will [illegible] any violent resistance to such [illegible] as England may choose to take. The British fleet is now supposed, in line of battle ships, to be the equal of any other two European powers, and would, in the opinion of naval officers, speedily clear the Dardanelles and the Black sea of Russian craft, and also give a good account of the French if they should interfere.

A dispatch from Portsmouth said that the naval authorities there had not heard officially of any seizure of a Turkish port or island, but one official who was interviewed said he would not be surprised at any time to hear of some official action, and that he had heard from his superiors on the subject, but that the whole situation, as publicly known, was highly threatening. The recent visit of the French fleet to Portsmouth, and the fraternal greetings and enthusiasm, add great interest to the subject of a possible war.

An Englishman intimately connected with the Turkish legation said today: "Should war break out between Russia and England, Turkey would, I think, allow them to fight it out, simply taking care of herself if attacked. I do not think that Turkey would construe the seizure of Sigri as an act of war against her, while at the same time she would not recognize the right of England to make the seizure, which however, remains to be confirmed."

At the Russian legation all was diplomatic reserve and silence, though the secretaries looked as if something grave had come to their knowledge.

A Munich dispatch says that the enthusiasm which attended the visit of the German kaiser was largely official and artificial, and that there is a widespread popular discontent with the policy of Prussianizing the country. The kaiser, for instance, has urged that the Prussian military code be adopted, instead of the Bavarian. The Prussian military code is regarded in Bavaria as not only severe, but inhuman, whereas that of Bavaria is exceptionally mild. Again it is said that an attempt is to be made in the federal council to compel Bavaria to give up her local postage stamps and adopt imperial stamps. These and other interferences with the autonomy of Bavaria are arousing no little ill-feeling and indignation is expressed that the regent, Prince Luitpold, does not take an earnest and unflinching stand in behalf of the native institutions of the kingdom.

Ex-Queen Isabella of Spain was one of the ladies present at the interview of the Bavarian troops on the occasion of their grand parade last week. The portly ex-queen has a grievance against the kaiser, because his majesty took no particular notice of her, although she endeavored to gain his attention.

General Grosvenor, who has been visiting the chief towns of Ireland in connection with the church at the World's Fair, is highly elated at his reception, and promises made for a good display of Irish products.

A despatch says that the pope is preparing an encyclical against the agitation now going on in Italy in favor of the enactment of a divorce law. The feeling in favor of such a law is very strong, and especially in the city of Rome itself.

BALMACEDA ESCAPES.

Disguised as a Sailor He Takes Refuge on an American Ship.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—A Herald special cable from Valparaiso under date of September 14, says: Balmaceda has escaped from the clutches of his enemies, and is now safe on the high seas under the protection of the United States flag.

All the time the soldiers of the Junta were guarding the stony passes of the Andes to prevent his getting into the Argentine republic and the police of the provisional government were searching the monasteries around Santiago for the fugitive president, he was in hiding in the city. He was more likely to escape detection there than anywhere else. For his capture a reward was offered that he would dare to return to Valparaiso, they being sure he had fled from it.

Balmaceda chose his refuge wisely, for he was enabled to throw himself upon the mercy of Admiral Brown of the San Francisco, and beg to be rated from the revenge of his foes. Admiral Brown did at last what all the other admirals would have done under similar circumstances. He stepped in to save human life.

To effect the ex-president's escape it was decided to have Balmaceda disguise himself as a drunken United States sailor. The clothing was sent ashore in a market boat last night by order of Admiral Brown. It was smuggled by one of Balmaceda's faithful adherents into the house where the ex-president was hiding. He carefully donned it. After a close inspection of his new and strange attire to see that there was nothing about the get up which would arouse suspicion he stole out the back entrance into the street. Nightfall favored his disguise, and he had studied his part so well that he feigned a drunken tar to perfection. On his way toward the water front he was met by many men who would have been delighted to have had a chance to seize and turn him over to the police. In time, he safely reached the spot in the harbor that had been arranged on. There he found a boat awaiting him. It was manned by sturdy United States men of war's men. Balmaceda still maintained his disguise, made his final drunken stumble and fell into the boat. It pushed off at once and in a short time the ex-president made an end to all signs of inebriety, clambered swiftly up the ropes and was safe.

He went at once to one of the cabin aft of the San Francisco and did not show himself above the deck. That part of the vessel was reserved solely for its prominent guest. Nobody was allowed to visit his cabin. The officers of the ship refused to talk about the matter but refused to talk. The San Francisco left tonight for Callao, where it will wait for California. Balmaceda may elect to land at Callao, where many of his leading partisans have already been landed by foreign ships on board which they sought refuge after the fall of Valparaiso.

Admiral Brown's action will undoubtedly for a time at least increase the bitter feeling toward the United States government, although the admirals of the other foreign vessels have taken many prominent Balmacedists aboard.

An Important Case.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—A Washington special to The Evening Post says: A very important case will be heard before Justice Field of the United States supreme court, on the 20th inst. It is the first hearing on a suit brought by the United States government in California involving the question whether the Southern Pacific company of Kentucky can exercise the general corporate powers and especially hold leases of railroad corporations in other states. As is well known, the charter for the Southern Pacific company of Kentucky was secured by C. P. Huntington for the purpose of taking lease of the Central Pacific, the California and Oregon, the Southern Pacific of California, and other railroads forming the so-called Huntington system. As the leases involve guarantees of interest and dividends on hundreds of millions of securities the great importance of the case will at once be seen. It is considered by a lawyer a dangerous suit for the defendant company.

A GREAT BORE.

The Immense Tunnel to Drain Leadville's Mines.

PREPARING FOR PEACH DAY.

Races and Firemen's Tournament on the Programme—A New Railroad Files Incorporation Papers—Short Lies in Gunnison County.

LEADVILLE, Sept. 14.—Last Friday a mammoth enterprise was placed on foot which will if put into effect, be of enormous value to the mining industry of Lake county.

It was decided this morning to carry the enterprise through, and although it will take two years labor and an expenditure of $750,000, the work is to be commenced this week and will be carried through to completion.

The enterprise consists of the building of a gigantic tunnel at least five miles in length to drain the water from the mines of the district. It will, when completed, leave open to easy access millions of tons of good ore that cannot now be gotten at and probably never can be handled without the use of proper drainage. John F. Campion, W. B. Dale and C. T. Carnahan, all well known and reliable mining men of this city, are the originators of this big enterprise.

The big tunnel will be started near Malta some four miles below Leadville, and will be run through Carbonate Hill. It will catch all the principal mines, striking the Maid of Erin at the depth of 950 feet, far below the present workings. It will go through the Minnata and Mikado and open up much new territory.

Only the practical mining man and especially the one who knows how many million dollars have been expended in attempting to drain Leadville properties can fully appreciate the value of this big scheme. It is a matter of record that during the last ten years over $3,000,000 has been expended in draining sections of this camp and not over two-tenths of the ground drained has been made available, because the water could not be properly handled. With the big tunnel completed this difficulty will be overcome.

Over $300,000 of the big sum required has already been put up and the success of the enterprise is assured.

A Peach Day Preparation.

GRAND JUNCTION, Sept. 14.—Extensive preparations are being made for the Peach Day festivities. The town looks finely, being gaily decorated. The weather is good. Word received from various towns indicates a great attendance tomorrow, and after the previous come the races which will last during the week.

The afternoon's tournament commences on Wednesday. Eight teams will participate, viz.: Ouray, Telluride, Ouray, Durango, Aspen, Fairplay, Glenwood Springs and Montrose. There will be a grand review at 9 o'clock, Wednesday. Prizes are offered as follows: Wet test, $150, $100 and $50; hub-and-hub, above like amounts; foot race, $75 and $105 also $75 for the best appearing team.

A New Railroad.

DENVER, Sept. 14.—The Rio Grande and Gunnison Railway company filed articles of incorporation this morning. The incorporators are J. J. Kelly, R. J. May, C. W. Waterman, H. H. Palmelee and C. A. Chisholm. The capital stock is $1,000,000 and the purpose of the company is to build a railway branching off from the Rio Grande at Warren Wood, Ouray in Rio Grande county, and running down up into Gunnison to Parlin or Cebolly.

BASE BALL

Western Association.

DENVER, Sept. 14.—Pres. Packard, of the Denver base ball club, was seen this afternoon in regard to the disbanding of the Western association. President Packard said that Denver would enter the Western association pennant. He has secured all the players for next year. Arrangements are being made by which the Denver club will play exhibition games in western and Pacific coast cities, with a club made up from the best players from the American association, captained by Captain Comiskey, of the St. Louis Browns, after the championship season is over.

President Packard says he will try to organize a six-club league for next year, to be composed of clubs from Kansas City, Omaha, Sioux City, St. Joseph, Denver and Pueblo.

National League.

CHICAGO-BOSTON.

BOSTON, Sept. 14.—In the game between Boston and Chicago today Hutchinson pitched the game of his life, holding the home club down to three scattered hits. Staley also pitched a strong game but his support was miserable. All of the visitors' runs were made on errors by the Boston. Score: Chicago 7, Boston 1.

CINCINNATI-BROOKLYN.

BROOKLYN, Sept. 14.—The Cincinnati team jumped on Caruthers in the sixth inning today and pounded him hard. In the seventh they took a rest and got their wind for the eighth inning, when they touched him up again pretty lively. The home club's errors helped the visitors in their slaughter of the pitcher. Score: Cincinnati 8, Brooklyn 5.

PITTSBURG-NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—The Pittsburg and Giants played a close and exciting game today. Both pitchers were effective but old Galvin had a shade the best of it. In the eighth inning after Tiernan had made a home run which gave the New Yorks a lead of one the visitors went in and scored two runs on Miller's single, Beckley's triple and a wild pitch. Score: Pittsburg 4, New York 3.

PHILADELPHIA-CLEVELAND.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 14.—Beatin was a soft mark for the Phillies today and Shearon was put in to relieve him early in the game. The visitors were pretty badly broken up, Kilfing pitched a very good game for the home club. Score: Philadelphia 13, Cleveland 3.

American Association.

At Columbus Columbus 10, Washington 2.

At Milwaukee Rain.

At St. Louis St. Louis 7, Baltimore 4.

At Louisville Boston 2, Louisville 3.

New York Stock Market.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—The stock market this morning opened fairly active with prices irregular, but in most cases ¼@½ per cent higher than they closed on Saturday, the only marked exception being Union Pacific which declined ¾. During the early trading the market became very weak, Missouri Pacific, Lackawanna, St. Paul, Erie, Atchison, Burlington and Richmond and West Point were especially pressed for sale and declined sharply. Richmond and West Point preferred as the weakest stock on the list, declined 1 per cent lower at [illegible] and the general market declined during the greater part of the morning and at noon prices were from ½ to ¾ per cent below Saturday's closing. The decline in Union Pacific was attributed to London selling. The dullness of the morning were at no time on a large scale.

After 12 o'clock the selling ceased, and the market began to recover. The announcement that $1,000,000 gold had been engaged to go to this city from abroad and a statement by the president of the Richmond and Terminal said to be in effect that the floating debt of the company had been provided for by the payment of three year notes [illegible] no fear of a receiver ship did much to strengthen prices. As the afternoon wore on the activity increased, prices closed with a sharp rally and in many cases the early decline was not only recovered, but a fractional advance on Saturday's figures established. Richmond and West Point stocks on the strength of the statement of the president of that road came to within a fraction of Saturday's closing. Final figures were:

Silver Purchases.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14. Of the 1,058,000 ounces of silver offered to the treasury department 24,000 ounces were purchased, ranging in prices from $.98 to $.9810.

An Improved Buoy.

A new buoy of great value has been added to the list of life saving devices. It consists of an annular copper tank, with a tube in the center, across which is hung a life chain, upon which a person can sit or support himself with ease while grasping the buoy. This tank is divided into numerous watertight compartments to minimize the possibility of injury. At the side are arranged two hollow rods, working upon a swivel joint, the bottom or heavier portion of these rods being equipped with cups for the reception of phosphide of calcium. When the buoy is hung at the ship's side the upper ends of these hollow rods are closed by stoppels, which answer the double purpose of securing the buoy while hung for use and also for preventing the entrance of rain from above into the can at the lower end.

When the buoy is cast adrift the heavier ends of the rods swing under the water like pendulums, immersing the cups containing the phosphide of calcium which is immediately fanned by the entrance of the water through the perforations for this purpose at the bottom. In the daytime a discharge of smoke issues from the upper ends of the hollow rods, while at night this smoke becomes a luminous flame that can be seen for several miles. Besides these advantages over the old type, which was seldom to be relied on, this buoy is more compact, better protected from injury and much lighter. It will support three persons. In a test of the buoy a man jumped overboard when a ship was going ahead at full speed. The ship was stopped, the buoy was dropped and the life saver was lowered, and in three minutes the man, who had reached the buoy, was picked up and brought on board.—Philadelphia Press.

Tennyson's Place of Art.

The group of poems in which Tennyson deals with art is important not only for the poems themselves, but for the light which they throw upon his artistic principles and tests. It is not altogether by chance that the poets to whom he gives greeting are Milton, Virgil, Dante and Victor Hugo. In "The Poet" you will find his lofty conception of the power of poetry, in "The Poet's Mind," his theory of its purity; in "The Poet's Song" his avowal that its mission depends upon faith in the immortal future.

"The Palace of Art" is an allegory of the impotence of art when divorced from human love. "The Flower" tells in a parable how art, divorced from sympathy with suffering humanity, "The Spiteful Letter" and "Literary Squabble," are reminiscences of the critical warfare which raged around him in his youth and made him sometimes forget his own principle of style, his work "as quietly and as well as possible without much heeding the praise or the dispraise."

But to my mind the most important of all his utterances on the matter of art is in "Merlin and the Gleam." The wonder is that none of the critics seem to have recognized it for what it really is—the poet's own description of his life work, and his clear confession of faith as a poet.—Rev. Dr. Van Dyke in Century.

Making Glass Bottles by Machinery.

The manufacture of glass bottles by machinery, undertaken a while ago by a New Jersey manufacturer, has not only proved a success, but appears to have some decided advantages over the ordinary method, even with the appliances and prices as thus far developed. Gathering the glass in the usual manner, it is allowed to run from the tool into an iron cup, which holds the quantity needed for making the bottle, when a hollow iron plunger at the bottom of the cup is pushed up through the mass and the cup reversed, leaving the glass in a plastic condition suspended from the hollow plunger through which air is admitted; the cup, which is hinged, is now removed, and the movement of a lever admits a small quantity of air, the bulb is then flattened at the bottom and dropped into the mold, which latter is at once closed and the air applied, this operation completing the bottle. It is rather while hot to the unpolished eye.

By the ordinary method of manufacture the ring at the top of the bottle neck is formed by a second operation, but this is done away with by the machine method, the bottle coming from the mold with a perfectly formed ring.—New York Sun.

Erosion Has Made Mountains.

Owing to the interbedding of hard and enduring sandstone, quartzite, gneiss and other rock formations, which more readily crumble limestone, shales, limestones and schists, erosion commonly produces a new topography, making knolls and long valleys where the more erodible beds have been removed, and leaving ridges [illegible]

More than this, when erosion has been continued through very long periods, it tends toward the ultimate result of reversing the upward curved or anticlinal portions of the great folds and sparing the originally lower downward curved or synclinal portions, until valleys take the places which were originally occupied by the highest upheavals, while the original troughs, where the rocks were most compacted by pressure, remain now as the principal mountain ridges. Under denudation, the folded mountainous belt fulfills the prophecy, "Every valley shall be exalted and every mountain and hill shall be made low."—Warren Upham in Popular Science Monthly.

Flies for Fishing.

Artificial flies may fairly be considered to illustrate the highest development of the art piscatorial. The imitations produced in this shape of winged insects, grasshoppers and the larvæ of various bugs are really wonderful. In their manufacture materials are drawn from every part of the world. Furs as well as feathers are utilized in making them. Deer, bears, monkeys, seals, rabbits, sheep, pigs, squirrels, dogs and even rats contribute. Agents are sent out from Paris to all parts of the earth to gather for this purpose the skins of rare and gaudy winged creatures. These plumes and furs represent chiefly the waste stock of the millinery and upholstery trades, nearly all of them being brought from France. The gut cords to which the fly hooks are attached are made from immature silkworms drawn out to the requisite length.—Interview in Washington Star.

Are Men Gossips?

In a park row restaurant—noon—Monday. A fat man, sandy whiskered; a lean fat man, no whiskers. Both well dressed. Might be lawyers.

"Ever notice one thing about Whiter?" asked No. 1. "He never orders a drop to drink when he invites me to lunch but when he goes with me he absorbs as freely as a sponge." "Apt simile," says No. 2. "He's a bundle of penny—[illegible]. We'll this fly day to hoist the pluralist. Notice how busy he was coming here yesterday at lunch time at all."

This style of talk was continued right along, and "White" was the persecuted subject. Are the "gents" of 66 this side close to Ann the equal of New York World.

[illegible] C. S. NORTH, Chairman.

The reported seizure by an English [illegible] of a town on the Turkish island of Mitylene, is not likely to be true. It is such an act of war as should follow rather than precede a declaration of hostility. The eye of Europe is fixed to which hostile sounds in this time most probably demand. If the event happened it was probably with Turkey's consent.

Colorado Springs people have always had a very kindly feeling towards the [illegible] and builders of its opera house. It was justly considered when the house was built that it was on a scale which was not warranted by the needs of this city in amusement [illegible]. To its convenience and attractiveness is due in large measure the fact that Colorado Springs has had more kind of a performance than any city of its size in the United States. Lawrence Barrett, Modjeska, Janauschek, Louis [illegible], Fanny Davenport, Mrs. [illegible], W. J. Florence, Roland Reed, [illegible] Siddons, Joe Emmett, Cora [illegible] are not the names usual to a city of this size, and that they have been seen must be ascribed as well to the opera house as to the sagacity and [illegible] of liberal managers. The additional expenditure for improvements of a [illegible] character, we are informed, than the total profits of the opera house during ten years, is sufficient indication of the continuance of a policy which has been so satisfactory in the past. It is true that the opera house needed repair, but it is also true that the repairs have been made with such liberality and public-spirited judgment that the [illegible] is practically a new house. Lending a substitute [illegible], comfortable, unexpected in a way elsewhere in which Colorado Springs may feel a just pride, whose [illegible] performances may fitly complement the memory of good performances now past.

THE HEAD OF THE MISSISSIPPI.

A very interesting document recently issued by the state of Minnesota concerns the source of the Mississippi. Lake Itasca, named by the explorer Schoolcraft in 1832, from two Latin words (veritas caput) supposed to mean "true head," was popularly called the source of the great river for many years. While it has been known since 1836 that there were other streams and lakes emptying into Itasca, the complete survey of them was not made until in 1890 when Mr. J. V. Brower was specially commissioned by the governor and historical society of Minnesota for this work.

The reason why the source of the river has been so long in doubt is this: beyond the river channel and the lake in which it starts is a wilderness of swamps and numerous small lakes. The drainage connection between these is underground, and only the most careful leveling could determine which of these was at the head of the chain, which were intermediate and which were merely side contributors.

In preliminary report, Mr. Brower gives attention first to Lake Itasca, situated at the forks of a valley [illegible] the three streams extend north, south-east and southwest, and the lake itself with three arms. It is the northern arm the outlet for the exit by which, after a big zig to the north and east, turns on its long generally straight course to the gulf.

The upper valley from the outlet of the lake [illegible] Red. The [illegible] in Mary lake, [illegible] two small Twin lakes and a larger one communicating with each other but not with Mary L. [illegible] also three lakes each of about a quarter mile diameter, and one mile away, which is valley [illegible] the head of the divide.

In the south-western valley the stream is known as the Infant Mississippi. It extends as far as the second of the Nicollet lakes. The third Nicollet lake is separated from the second by a narrow ridge through which there is no visible communication, and the complete into it a creek, nearly a mile in length, which has its source in a group of springs. Beyond this are a dozen lakes [illegible] top of the divide lake Hernando De Soto, the highest body of open water in the valley of the Mississippi. It is 1670 feet above sea level and 2355 from the Gulf of Mexico by the channel of the river.

Tributary to the southwest arm is also Elk lake, of considerable size and with one tributary creek. This lake has by some been claimed as the true source of the great river. But Mr. Brower disposes of this by saying that at some seasons the channel between Lakes Itasca and Elk is dry and that at others the water flows out of Itasca and into Elk.

Thus 350 years after DeSoto first looked upon the great muddy Father of Waters the geographical mystery is laid bare. Henceforth the question of the source of the Mississippi will be one of definition. The creeks and lakes are mapped. Whether the source is the head of the highest running stream, or in the highest lake which has no outlet, or at the summit of the divide, the facts are open to all the world.

It is pleasant to know that this whole region has been secured as a state park, and that however much man may vex Father Mississippi with boats and levees farther down, his head lies pillowed undisturbed amid the mossy and grassy of the primeval wilderness.

WESTERN BREVITIES.

The twelfth annual fair of the San Juan County Agricultural association will open at Junction City, September 23, and elaborate preparations for the fruit display that is made at this annual exhibition are now well under way.

The first number of The Free Press made its appearance in Paton, Colo., Saturday, edited by W. W. Wirt, editor and proprietor. It is a neatly printed four-page paper, independent in politics, and will be published weekly.

The Cripple Creek Crusader has changed hands, A. W. Ammons having transferred his interest in the paper to Dr. Jenkins. Mr. Ammons intends to engage in the newspaper business now Denver.

ONLY SURVIVOR OF A CABINET.

Judge James Campbell Is Stalwart Years Old, but Now a Busy Man.

JUDGE CAMPBELL.

J. Ange Campbell, of Philadelphia, is the last survivor of the cabinet of President Pierce, and a very vigorous and interesting old man also. On his eightieth birthday, which he celebrated recently, he took a long walk in the morning, visited Girard college in the afternoon and in the evening [illegible] to Delaware county, where [illegible] the wedding of two young friends.

Judge Campbell is a native of the Quaker City, and has been identified with its interests all his life. His father was a [illegible] and gave him a good education. He was admitted to the bar when twenty-one years of age and shortly after wards held his first public office that of school director in the district of South [illegible]. He served on the bench as judge of the court of common pleas of Philadelphia county by appointment of Governor David Porter in 1851, and held the place for two years. Then he took the office of district attorney and Judge Campbell suffered defeat at the polls. Governor Bigler made him attorney general of the state, and he retained in that position until 1853, when he entered President Pierce's cabinet as postmaster general. One of his colleagues was Jefferson Davis, and the two kept up a correspondence until it was terminated by the [illegible] of Davis's [illegible].

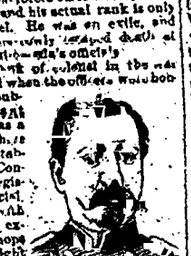
At present Judge Campbell is the oldest member of the Historical club, president of the board of trustees of Jefferson Medical college, chairman of the committee on [illegible] of Girard college and a member of the board of city trusts, and is connected with the management of the Beneficial Savings fund and of St. Joseph's Orphan asylum. He is still actively interested in politics, and has many times been a delegate to the Democratic state and national conventions.

A VICTORIOUS LEADER.

The Man Who Is Responsible for Balmaceda's Defeat.

The sudden ending of the civil war in Chili by the defeat of President Balmaceda, drew attention to the man who led the Congressional forces to victory. His name is Canto, and his actual rank is only that of a colonel. He was an exile, and [illegible] recently escaped death at the hands of Balmaceda's officers.

[illegible] life was that of colonel in the army with Peru, and when the officers were [illegible] with a public dinner last year he gave as a toast, "The Three Powers: Established by the Constitution—Legislative, Judicial, Executive," with a few remarks expressive of hope that they might work in harmony. President Balmaceda soon ordered his arrest and trial by military court, the result being that he spent some months in prison, and was then sent to the northern section as an exile.



COLONEL CANTO.

When the rebellion broke out he happened to be in the telegraph office at Tacna. The operator held up a dispatch, and with a significant look said, "There is something in this about you." Colonel Canto took the hint and fled at once to the Congressional party, who received him joyfully and made him their commander. The dispatch was an order to the local commander to arrest him at once and send him to Santiago. Now he is in Santiago for a fact, the victorious general, while Balmaceda is in flight. General Canto is but forty years of age, short of stature and of dark complexion, a well drilled soldier, and just at present probably the most popular man in Chili.

Printing by Electricity.

Printing machines are usually driven by steam or gas motors, but the machine which prints a certain newspaper in America is run by dog power. A large wheel about ten feet in diameter and two in width is connected with the driving pulleys of the machine by means of a belt. Inside of wood, for foothold, are placed a foot apart on the inside of the wheel, where Joe, the journalistic dog, walks his weary round, and thus causes the wheel to revolve. Joe has run the farm for about five years, and has faithfully earned his board and lodging, but it is now about time for him to feel old and "turn it up," being unable to continue running it longer. [illegible]

WITH A HEALTH DOCTOR.

EARLY MORNING SCENES IN TENEMENT-HOUSE DISTRICTS.

Half Starved Babies and Children That Live on Decayed Fruit and Nourishment That Is Worse—Deadly Smells Abound and How They Are Corrected.

Twenty minutes in one of the districts of the summer corps of the board of health will enable any one to obtain an idea of how the tenement-house people live. Imagine that you have accepted an invitation to spend twenty minutes with one of the summer doctors.

It is a hot August day, 8 o'clock in the morning. The air even at this early hour is stifling. Are you surprised to find life astir here? Remember you are in the midst of the poor people, who begin their day's labor at 6 o'clock. Entering our district, nothing escapes our eyes. See this stand on the corner piled up with fruit, beautiful to behold, suggesting a garden in the tropics. But what is that odor? And this wee newsboy—what does he want to buy?

"Curiosity to see what the child is going to buy, also our duty impelling us to discover the cause of the odor, hold us a moment. We see that he buys two peaches for a cent, and then for the first time notice that the luscious heaps consist of piles of decaying fruit thrown promiscuously together—rotten pears, bananas and peaches; this rotten fruit selling at two and three for a cent. We mildly accost the owner and tell him such fruit is not wholesome; it ought to be thrown away.

He "doesn't care" about the unwholesomeness of the stuff. We then show our badge and make him throw it away. We pass on thinking that we have saved the lives of many children, an ounce of prevention being better than a pound of cure.

Pushing our way, we proceed. It is easily pushing our way, for the street is lined with mothers, each holding a baby in her arms, with another dragging on to her skirts. Some are sitting on the stoops, some in the areas and others on the curbstones; in fact, they are all over. Suddenly we hear a pitiful wail from a little baby. We know what that means—it means that the baby is thirsty. The mother also thinks she knows. She gives it the breast. The poor baby, after sucking it eagerly and trying many ways, relinquishes it and again cries that pitiful, forlorn wail.

NATURE'S WAY.

Can any one be ignorant that nothing can quench thirst but water? Milk is a poor substitute. Here is a chance to give a private lecture, and presently we are telling the mother that the baby needs water to quench its thirst; the hot weather makes it sweat a good deal; it loses a great deal of water and so needs a great deal. A passing ice wagon furnishes a scrap of ice. It does one good to see how eagerly baby sucks it. This moistur lives in a house where there are fifteen other mothers, and asking her to tell the others, we walk away feeling sure before night all these babies will be drinking water. We have told her to boil the water, put it on ice and then give it to the baby to drink.

Looking up and down the street we see that it is very dirty. Going over to investigate a pile of dirt, we see on its outside a foot of [illegible] which is almost gone. Given a hot August day, a pack of garbage and the [illegible] dirt, and we have a germ breeding center. The people inhale this air all day and all night.

Looking around we see the houses that need as much dirty, filthy houses. We count the people coming out in the street all day—yes, and all night. We see a group of mothers and children standing at a hall door. They make room for us to pass. We stop to speak to them. Noticing a lovely, white faced girl of about twenty years, and seeing a child clinging to her dress, we ask her about the baby, then about herself. She tells us that the baby is a year and a half old, still nursing. Asking her if she does not know that babies should be weaned at nine months, the answer we receive is, yes, that she knows, but it does not hurt it and it saves the cost of buying milk for the baby, for they are very poor.

DEATH IN THE CELLAR.

Out in the yard we notice a child about three years old, with an old man's face—Old Age being characteristic of rickets, that disease now becoming so common among poor people. This little one is busy eating an apple skewered on a stick, and eating it as if it were its entire breakfast, not desiring any relish, but the whole apple. In contrast to this one and other dirty children, three clean children attracted attention, and what a contrast!

Our twenty minutes is almost up, but we can hardly tear ourselves away from this gypsy like encampment. A last look at them forces a smile, as we see a German housefrau with her basket of lunch, blanket and knitting. She has evidently come from an upper story to spend the day on the sidewalk. In the hall we meet a pleasant faced, motherly woman; she is evidently the janitress. We ask her about the number of families in the house, children, plumbing, sickness, etc. We notice a distinct odor in the hall. We'll try the cellar. She lights us down there, and answers glibly all our questions. We are really ashamed to have suspected anything wrong in the cellar, but the odor is a danger signal, which says, "take heed; danger!"

We look around the cellar; all clean and dry. We are just going to leave when we see a relieved look in her face, and suspecting at once something wrong, begin to pry about from end to end. Knocking on one end of the wall we find it not solid, but boarded up. We pull one of the boards out and discover the cause of the odor. There lies an underground lake, fed not by springs, but by an old leak in the sewer! This, at least, the authorities can deal with. We report the case at once.—New York Herald.

Did it ever occur to you to think how wretchedly inferior as a runner man is to nearly every other living creature?

Had Him There.

Dorking—What's the reason you didn't speak to Boreham when he passed us?

Brown—He insulted me the other day called me a freckled idiot.

Dorking—Called you a freckled idiot. how absurd! Why, you are not freckled!—London Fun.

A Parting Injunction.

He (at the seaside hop)—Dear me, you must excuse me a moment. I had a caramel in the tail pocket of my dress coat, and I have just sat down on it.

She—Au revoir. Don't forget to bring back the caramel. Clothier and Furnisher.

A Bonnet Home in the Southwest.

Into the face of one of the low vertical earth walls of the broken land the homemaker cuts a hole as a Yankee farmer digs a cellar for a hillside barn. Though rarely larger than 10 by 14 feet on the bottom, these cellarlike houses are sometimes 12 by 18, with the depth of the hole as much as 6 or 6 feet, and sometimes 18 by 15 large, with the long way of the hole lying along the front of the natural earth wall.

The digging completed, trees are cut to fill the hole for building up the front of the house, and for use as rafters, placed a foot or so apart over the top. The limbs of the trees, with some long grass from a moist place, if any can be found, are used to make a rude thatch over the rafters, and then the sods, cut neat and carefully saved when the hole was dug, are placed on top of the thatch, while the earth from the hole is heaped on top of all into a grave shaped mound. A blanket is hung in the doorway, or the cotton from the wagon hoops will serve, and there is the dugout home as cozy as the home of a prairie dog or a woodchuck.—John R. Spears in Scribner's.

Dr. Charles Macrum, of Portland, Ore., is authority for the statement that the canvasback duck can fly two miles a minute and a minute has seen for hours. The mallard duck travels a mile a minute.

REVELATION.

Perchance in some far after time,
When some nobler stature grows,
Shall learn to make our lives sublime—
For Girl's and Truth's dear sake slope
The solemn use of grief shall site,
And Joy again her ancient grace,
And reach a nearer, ampler sky,
With life's sad mysterious face to face.

With passionless Wisdom we shall talk,
And learn of Sorrow's darkest hire,
And in the light of Knowledge walk
Forever and forever more!
Top sure result of time is change,
And Chanseher endless gamut rings—
Things that today are new and strange
Tomorrow are forgotten things.

The slow mutations of the years,
The growth of peace; the lapse of strife
May solve the problem of our tears;
The dark and speechless Sphinx of life!
The grief that wails not on the lips,
The keen, slow pang of spiritual pain,
Some angel of the Apocalypse
Shall make its solemn meaning plain.

Well, let it pass! We live our lives,
We dream our dreams—they slip away.
A little long spelling up and thence
Nearer to Truth's immortal day!
Circle on circle ever—
Our little waves of being swell,
Gather and break against the door
Of Death's eternal citadel!
—New York Ledger.

How Plasterers Go Without a Doctor.

Every trade has its special physic. This is true. In conversation a surgeon remarked that few things gave more pain, attended with so much danger, as some particles of lime dust in the eye. A gentleman standing by remarked: "And yet such an accident is very correctly; is attended with hardly any danger, and is most easily treated." "How so?" echoed a chorus of voices.

"Well, I will tell you. I was brought up to the trade of a plasterer, a ceiling plasterer. You may not know that the final layer upon a good ceiling is almost pure lime. The plasterer stands upon a platform and lays on the paste. It falls upon him in every direction, and, especially if he is a new hand, often a splatter falls right into his eye. When he gets accustomed to the work the eyelid seems to get used to it, too, and seems to close automatically in self defense.

"Directly such an accident occurs a fellow workman takes a mouthful of water from the nearest pail and there is always a pailful of water handy opens the eye as wide as possible and squirts with all his force the contents of his mouth against the eyeball. This immediately cools the lime and also drives it out of the eye. Simple remedy, isn't it, and eminently practical? But you see a man's eye would be burned out long before he could reach the nearest doctor's."

How a Bribe Ruined a Nation.

When the French quartermaster, Disjonval, was confined in prison by the Dutch at Utrecht he sought to beguile the tedium of his prison life by attentively studying the habits of the place which he occupied his 17th and 18th years of imprisonment gave him leisure to be well versed in their ways. In December of 1794 the French army, on whose victory over the Dutch depended Disjonval's restoration to liberty, were in Holland, and the victory seemed certain if the frost, which was then of unprecedented severity, continued.

The Dutch envoys had failed to negotiate a peace, and Holland was desperating when the frost suddenly broke. The Dutch were now exulting, and the French generals prepared to retreat; but the spiders of Disjonval's cell forewarned him that the thaw would be of short duration, and he knew that his little insect weather monitor never deceived him. Accordingly he contrived to communicate his weather knowledge to the army of his countrymen and its generals, who duly estimated his (Disjonvals) character, relied upon his assurance, that within a few days the weather would again be frozen so as to be passable to the French troops.

They delayed their retreat; within twelve days a sharp freeze set in, and the French army triumphed. Disjonval was released, and a spider had brought ruin to the Dutch nation. St. Louis Republic.

Specter Photographs.

Mr. Arthur S. Green, an American photographer, gives the following method of making the camera a source of amusement by the production of "ghost" or "shadow" pictures for example, a seated man starting back in terror from his own specter. Make a background of the proper size by stretching out some black material. Place the subject, draped in white or in light clothing, in the right attitude to the right or left of the center of the background, then focus the camera and expose the plate for half a second. The impression will be that of a shadowy and ghostlike figure. Take a chair and table, placing the chair in the center of the background, and the table on the side away from the ghost.

Seat the subject in the chair, with his head turned to the ghost; focus again, and give the plate a full exposure, which, if the light is good, should be about two seconds. Develop and print in the usual way. Any objects to be seen through the ghost should be photographed with fifteen seconds' exposure before taking the picture of the ghost. Other devices of the kind might be mentioned, but it will be more interesting to leave them to the ingenuity of the amateur.—New York Advertiser.

Fishing for Ducks.

In India an ingenious scheme is practiced for taking ducks on a line, which is attached at one end to a flexible stick stuck up in the mud, the other extremity having a double pointed needle of bone attached to it. The latter is baited by stringing upon it some grains of corn. Presently along comes Mr. Duck, swallows the needle and finds himself a captive the moment he tries to fly away. In old times the Cape Cod fishermen depended largely for bait upon the sea fowl they took on their voyages. To catch them they threw out fishing lines with hooks on the ends, to which were attached chunks of cod liver. The latter floated because of the oil they contained, and murres, gulls and other birds swallowing them were quickly pulled in, skinned and chopped up.—Interview in Washington Star.

A Diving Cat.

Dr. Winterbottom, who for forty five years lived opposite Pressburg church, had a brook running by the end of his back garden. A tortoise shell cat belonging to the house would sit on one of two steps leading to the water, and at sight of a fish would dive into the water the same as a dog, and seldom failed to come out with the desired prize. This was a daily occurrence.—London Tit-Bits.

At the Court of a South Sea King.

A Narrative of Life on the Gilbert Islands, an out-of-the-way Group of the South Pacific Ocean.

BY ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON.

A new series of letters by Robert Louis Stevenson, describing his experiences and adventures in the Gilbert Islands. This is a group cut off from all regular intercourse with the outside world, to which no post goes, and where only occasional trading ships touch.

Life in this strange place is most interesting and picturesque. The articles are full of incidents and anecdotes, delightful character sketches of queer people, and dramatic bits of dialogue. The narrative is as captivating as a piece of fiction, full of color, of movement, of strange situations and pictures. The material is altogether fresh and novel. In these papers Stevenson is at his best; they show in its full maturity the charming style of the most perfect master of English of our day.

I. IN A DESERT SEA. Arrival at Butaritari. Island characteristics. The King's palace not so commodious as a laborer's house in the United States. A visit to the King.

II. THE FOUR BROTHERS. The story of a South Sea chieftain. The King acts as executioner. The harem of a tropical potentate. A prince who was nicknamed "Mr. Corpse."

III. AROUND MY HOUSE. Strange sights from the writer's house in the Gilbert Islands. A sea wall built by the hands of queens. The toddy cutters. Beautiful women of the South Pacific. Only one white woman in the islands. A sample ruffian of the South Seas. The parson of Butaritari.

IV. A TALE OF A TAPU. The King of the Cannibal Islands on a spree. Curious scenes at Court.

V. MORE CONCERNING THE TAPU. Spies about us. Attack by natives. In danger from drunkards.

VI. THE FIVE DAYS' FESTIVAL. Invited to the King's summer house. A concert of native singers. A barbaric opera. A wonderfully dramatic dance. A South Sea topical song. A native who made a flying machine. A magic lantern show.

VII. HUSBAND AND WIFE IN THE GILBERTS. "A Paradise of Naked Women." Polygamy in the South Seas. Etiquette among the natives. Scenes in a Gilbertine household.

VIII. THE KING OF APEMAMA. The royal trader. The hero of song and the butt of gossip. The last of the South Sea tyrants. A savage Napoleon. An island chief who owns ships.

IX. HOW THE KING BUILT A TOWN FOR STEVENSON. Constructing a city in a day. Walled by a taboo.

X. THE PALACE OF MANY WOMEN. A retinue of dusky ladies. An evening at cards with the King. A game of royal inventions. A kingly poet of the Southern Seas.

XI. OUR ATTENDANT FROM THE PALACE. Uncle Parker and his sleight-of-hand performance. The royal cook, and how he was disgraced.

HOME DECORATION.

QUITE AS IMPORTANT AS DRESS OF THE PERSON.

Increased Wealth and Lower Prices Have Enabled to Give Us a Chance to Orna[illegible] Our Rooms More Artistically than Formerly.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—The decoration of a lady's home is quite as important to a woman as the decoration of her person, and more so to the rest of a family, and makes a change in one as well as the other. To have a charming home is like [illegible] found for the lovely woman, who is the angel of the household.

NEW PORTIERE.

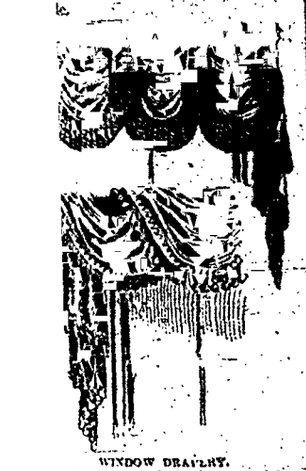
The love of the beautiful which is [illegible] in every woman's heart shows itself in many ways, but it is clear that affection centers in her home, and the poorest has its little ornaments to show the strivings of the woman for a "home beautiful." With increased wealth, prosperity and lower prices the ladies are turning more and more to art decoration, and portieres, window draperies, lambrequins and mantelpieces have been "in" for several years, and have paved the way for the panel of parlors, bedrooms and boudoirs, and sometimes even offices.

There is no more chenille, cotton faced, [illegible] or silkolene used as draperies, and [illegible] place to [illegible] ton draperies, in rainbow stripes of [illegible] on a transparent ground. The [illegible] is as [illegible] with [illegible] of different shades of green, yellow or red, shading from one edge to the other, from the palest to darkest. [illegible] at very reasonable prices, and it is suitable for [illegible] of bedroom draperies. Some has crosswise stripes in oriental [illegible] the wider stripe at the bottom. [illegible] faced tapestries, fifty-four inches [illegible] are shown for wall decorations and [illegible], as well as coverings for furniture. A whole room done in one pattern is elegant.

[illegible] faced portieres and others called [illegible] are very handsome, and some of [illegible] are reversible, requiring no lining. [illegible] portieres are made reversible [illegible] with [illegible] bordering in colonial [illegible]. Some of the portieres are to be [illegible] and they are made of rich satin [illegible], in two and three colors, in the [illegible] and pleasing tints, in Louis XI and colonial patterns, the [illegible] elegant enough for a [illegible]'s gown, when used for portieres and portiers are lined with silk [illegible] in the width, called sunshine drapery. It [illegible] in two tints, one following [illegible] principal one in the design and the [illegible] contrasting, and thrown over the [illegible] is a trifling fretwork in white, [illegible] makes of it an exquisite material. [illegible] is also used separate from the [illegible] in many instances, as it is reversible.

[illegible] covers are made to match the [illegible] and hangings, and come in [illegible] sizes, so that a room can be completely furnished to match, from one piece of goods. A few years ago this would have been beyond the reach of all but the very wealthy, but these silk tapestries are now being made in [illegible], and while they are every whit [illegible] and handsome, as well as durable, the imported, cost much less.

Here are illustrations of how these [illegible] should be arranged. The upper [illegible] a portiere is from Senator Stewart's house. It is lined with sunshine and is damask in small pattern, with a deep border to match above. The [illegible] one is a door in the [illegible] room of the White House, showing a Louis XI [illegible] with deep bordering on foot and [illegible]. This is in a beautiful soft shade [illegible] hale of the furnishing and [illegible] room are made of the same. [illegible] does not hang on rings, but to have been simply thrown over [illegible].



WINDOW DRAPERY.

Window draperies and lambrequins [illegible] much as one likes, but these are in graceful styles. The upper [illegible] drapery at Mrs. Edison's parlor windows, in brocatel with garnet and [illegible] fringe. The curtains are of brocatel [illegible] and garnet. The lower [illegible] like the drapery in old rose and [illegible] over doors and windows in Washington's home. Below are reproduced damask portieres and curtains.

Evidence of the Sun's Variability.

[illegible] can not rest with the assumption that since the sun is evidently no Mira [illegible] Sirius, therefore it is practically [illegible] changing radiator which for an indefinite period will continue to cause the earth to bloom in the beneficent [illegible] of its life inspiring rays. A sun [illegible] affect the welfare of its planets [illegible] through the gradual mutations [illegible] it undergoes in the course of its [illegible], or through the more rapid [illegible] changes that characterize [illegible] that are ranked as variable. [illegible] seen that most of these latter [illegible] to the third and fourth class, [illegible] there is reason to suspect that the [illegible] of all the stars are variable to [illegible] degree, and evidence of variation in the case of the sun is furnished [illegible] phenomena of sun spots. G. P. [illegible] in Popular Science Monthly.

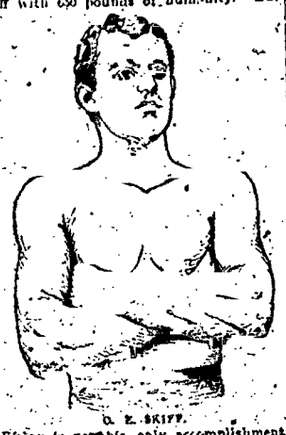
Natural Soda Water Fountains.

Some parts of the Colorado desert [illegible] boils up from springs, which are surrounded by circular hillocks of calcite of lime from four to eight feet in height, the material of which has been deposited from the flowing fluid. The latter is so highly charged with gas that it is very difficult to keep corks in bottles filled with it. It seems queer to find in such a desolate country real soda water fountains supplied by nature. Strups are not offered to order, unfortunately. The lime deposited on the rocky shores was contributed by such springs as these, bubbling up from what was then the bottom of the lake.—Washington Star.

SKIFF IS A YOUNG HERCULES.

A California Man Who Can Handle Heavy Weights.

The glorious climate of California has developed a strong man who has surprised lovers of athletic feats all over the country. He is known as Professor O. E. Skiff, and San Francisco is his home. Skiff [illegible] men, and he has even been known to walk off with 650 pounds of humanity. But lifting is not his only accomplishment. He can bend a half inch bar of steel with comparative ease, and break one of the same size across his thigh.



O. E. SKIFF.

As an iron jawed man he displays his ability by placing one end of a bar of steel two inch in circumference in his mouth and bending the bar as if it were an ordinary lath. Skiff also carries a pair of flatwith him that are built on the battering ram principle. Many men think it quite wonderful to crack the panel of a door with a single punch but Skiff can easily break a two inch board, it is said.

Bicyclist W. W. Taxis.

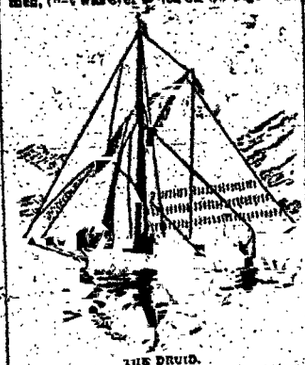
One of the best known bicyclists in Philadelphia is W. W. Taxis, who is said to have won more prizes than any other knight of the silent steed in America. He is not confined to one style of wheel, but rides with equal success both the safety and the ordinary. He has defeated some of the best riders in the United States and he wheels now in the Quaker City can stay with him in a race.

W. W. TAXIS.

One of Taxis' most notable accomplishments was winning the quarter mile American championship at Detroit recently. He rides under the colors of the Schuylkill navy.

The Chicago Yacht Druid.

Here is a picture of the swift yacht Druid, winner of the Chicago regatta, the prettiest race, it is said, of all lake yachtraces, that was ever sailed off Chicago. The yachts entered were George M. Pullman's Druid, T. G. Dickinson's Scorpion, E. P. Ware's Phantom and Henry Henderson's Ina. The Druid was the only 46-footer, the others ranging from 35 to 38 in round numbers.



THE DRUID.

The winner's time over the twenty-mile course was [illegible] hours, and five minutes after Druid crossed the line the Scorpion followed her.

Archery Champion Marson.

At the thirteenth annual tournament of the National Archery association at Natural Bridge, Va., recently, the championship was won by Louis Marson, of Washington, with a score of 174 hits. M. C. Howell, of Cincinnati, was second, with a score of 165 hits, while W. A. Clark, a former champion, was third, with 161 hits. Mrs. M. C. Howell, of Cincinnati, won the championship in the Columbia round. The association was organized in 1879, and Maurice Thompson was its first president. The opening tournament was held in Chicago, and annual meetings, at which the long bow has been cheerily pulled, have been held at various cities throughout the Union. Archery is in great favor in England and is growing in popularity in America.

LOUIS MARSON.

Philippe D'Ennery.

Philippe D'Ennery, who is spoken of as the most prolific playwright of the day, is now regarded as being the successor of M. De Lesseps as the idol of Paris. He has written more than a hundred dramas of one kind and another, and although he is eighty years old, he is now at work on a play, of which great things are expected. D'Ennery had gained fame before he had reached his twentieth year.

Ceylon's Enormous Tea Crop.

Although coffee raising is practically at an end in Ceylon the planters of that big tropical island are doing well with tea which is now cultivated on 280,000 acres of land. The product for next year is estimated at 70,000,000 pounds.

District Court.

The proceedings in the district court yesterday were as follows:

1531. Samuel S. Lamtholm vs. Conger & Bacon. Default and hearing. Judgment for plaintiff for $21.57. Attachment sustained and special execution ordered.

1280. The Beaver Water Supply Co. et al. vs. the city of Colorado Springs. Stricken from hearing calendar.

1129. People vs. Newton Hall. The trial of this case occupied all day, the jury retiring shortly after 5 o'clock. The defendant was charged with a criminal assault upon a little girl in June last at the police station on Nevada avenue. The jury was out but a few minutes and returned a verdict of guilty. Mr. Brinson, for defendant, gave notice of a motion for a new trial.

A jury was empaneled in the case of the People vs. John H. Hampton, charged with assault with intent to kill, and the case will be heard to-day.

Court will meet at 9:30 o'clock this morning.

Trials for to-day:

1133. People vs. John H. Hampton.

1329. Charles Smock vs. the Denver, Texas and Fort Worth railroad company.

T. W. Keene.

Thomas W. Keene opened his season at Wheeling last week to a crowded house. That was fortunate, but in the homeward rush from the mountains of summer vacationists his trunks got mixed up and went astray with some of their baggage, and at 7 in the evening he found himself with no costume with which to play Louis XI. This was bad, but it would never do to disappoint a crowded house—it wouldn't be sensible or profitable, so the tragedian sent messengers out in search of raiment suitable for the great French despot—for "one night only." One of the ladies of the company had a natty, black jockey's cap, which was seized upon as the king's treasure. Its peak was cut off and some leaden toy soldiers were stitched on to it for images. Black stockings and slippers were easily procured, and just in the nick of time a very dark dressing gown was found, which served for Louis' royal robe. Thus accoutered Mr. Keene played the fanatic monarch with greater spirit and zest than he has shown in years. He was stimulated by the thought that as his wardrobe wasn't detailing his acting must be brilliant, and it made a hit. Mr. Keene will appear in a Shakespearean tragedy at the opera house next Monday evening.

Business.

A man who was preparing a series of receipts for a cook book thought "the slices of a celebrated chef as critic and reviser of his work. One day he permitted to the chef a receipt for lemon pie which ended with the direction, "Then sit on the stove and stir constantly." The chef twirled his thumbs and said, "It strikes me that's rather a hard direction, for if you sit on a stove you're bound to stir constantly." San Francisco Argonaut.

CITY COUNCIL.

Gas Works Will Sell at a Premium.

All the members of the city council but Alderman Davis responded to their names when City clerk Corman called the roll at the special meeting last night.

Alderman Rouse read a letter from Chief-engineer M. A. Rogers, of the Denver and Rio Grande, to Mr. J. M. Ellison, in which he said that there was no occasion for the citizens or council of Colorado Springs "to be exercised or alarmed in regard to the intention of this company to fulfill its agreement regarding the Huerfano street viaduct, in every particular." The road, he said, had no disposition to retard the preparation or consideration of plans and estimates, but they would be forthcoming in ample time to complete the work by the time called for in the Rapid Transit company's proposition. He expected that a general plan would be submitted to the city council not later than Sept. 30, and that detail plans would be done by Oct. 31, in plenty of time for all shop work and erection previous to May 1, 1892.

The part of the council chamber outside the rail was about half full of young men who represented the various eastern bankers who were bidding for the $70,000 issue of 6 per cent. water bonds. The opening of these bids was the next business taken up. Seven firms had sent in bids as follows:

Lampracht Bros. & Co., Cleveland, O.	$71,211 50
Geo. Lewis & Co., New York	71,150 00
Blair & Co., New York	70,093 00
N. W. Halsey, New York	70,250 00
W. J. Hayes & Son, Cleveland	70,040 00
Adams, Blodgett & Co., New York	69,375 00
Parson, Leavitt & Co., Toledo, O.	69,425 00
Spitzer & Co., Chicago

Mr. Davis, the chairman of the finance committee, was out and Mr. Dunbar was appointed to act in his place. The council took a recess until the committee returned and asked that the council give them until 3 o'clock this afternoon to make report. This was granted and it was moved that when the council adjourn it be until 3 o'clock to-day.

Mr. Bartlett's resolution hurrying up the Huerfano viaduct matter was brought up and after some discussion was laid on the table, in the light of the letter from the chief engineer of the road. There was some discussion as to whether the original agreement for the two viaducts, with the D. & R. G. had ever been accepted by the council, but it was decided that it has tacitly acknowledged the agreement whether formally accepted or not.

Mr. Roby introduced a contract for approval by the council between the city and the Manitou and Pike's Peak railway. This provided that the railroad company would carry the camping outfits, pipes and tools required for the construction of the proposed pipe line from the settler to beyond Palmgrove's, and should allow the pipe to be laid along their right of way. The city on the other hand, was to pay them $4,000 and to let them have the first chance to purchase water power from the city. Mr. Roby explained that by running this pipe line along the right of way over $10,000 would be saved, beyond the $4,000 paid. The water power generated in the pipe would be 2500 horse power which might have a considerable value some day. He said further that the pipe would be so laid that in case of a break it would not destroy any of the tracks, and it would be made of wrought iron so that it would not easily be broken. The agreement was unanimously accepted and the mayor and city clerk were empowered to sign it for the city.

It was ordered that a warrant be drawn for some $1,420.09 to Messrs. Eaton, Wolcott and Howbert for their reservoir site near Lake Moraine.

The fire department committee was asked to get bids for the extension of the fire alarm system according to plans prepared by the chief.

Alderman Leech introduced a Mr. Smith of West Colorado Springs, who addressed the council. He was the owner of some lots on the south side of Colorado avenue. The city had built a culvert which sent great volumes of water down over his lots, which were a little depressed, at every storm. He was opposed to having his real estate washed down into the Gulf of Mexico, and he wanted the city to do something about it. After some suggestions about turning the water to one side and then down a street, or purchasing a part of Mr. Smith's land that contained the natural water way, the matter was referred to the city engineer, city attorney and street and ditch committee to investigate and report.

Alderman Rouse, of the street and ditch committee, reported that Fountain street and South Cascade avenue would be graded as soon as the South Tejon street under-crossing was done, which would not be long. He had the ordinances granting right-of-way, to show that the Midland and Union Pacific should plank their tracks on Moreno avenue, and the city clerk was instructed to notify the two companies to do so at once.

An ordinance was introduced amending the ordinance concerning nuisances by adding another section, providing that the burning of any grass, weeds, litter or rubbish on any lot or street in the city, should be adjudged a nuisance, and any person offending should be fined not less than five nor more than twenty-five dollars for each offense. A motion was made to suspend the rules and place the ordinance on its passage, but it was not carried and the ordinance went over to the next regular meeting. People had better burn their trash in the interim.

Council then adjourned.

Cliff Dwellers.

The recent discoveries in the canons of southwestern Colorado and Utah among the ruins of the ancient Cliff Dwellers, add a most interesting and valuable chapter to the science of archeology. It is difficult to ascertain the age of this mysterious people, but it is believed that they antedate the Mound Builders who are the predecessors of the American Indian. The relics which Rev. C. H. Green has been collecting, and which have attracted so much attention in Manitou during the summer, certainly point to a very early date. The mummies and skulls indicate a stalwart race, larger than our own. The tools and agricultural implements are of the crudest sort. Enough material has been collected by Mr. Green to throw much light upon their industries and manner of life and one feels after an hour's chat with him as if transported through the centuries the early days of the human race.

At his lecture at the Baptist church to-night he will exhibit his best specimens. The price of admission is twenty-five cents, children fifteen cents.

Famous Ogontz School.

Many appreciative Philadelphians have located at Ogontz, near Philadelphia, and some of the estates are simply magnificent. One of the finest is that occupied by the famous Ogontz school, where a hundred of the richest girls in the United States, the daughters of millions and billions, are annually fitted for Vassar, Wellesley and Smith colleges. This estate belongs to Jay Cooke, and was occupied by him during the civil war when the great capitalist loaned so many loans for the government. The house was converted into a [illegible] containing over sixty sleeping rooms, which now are the dormitories of the daughters of wealth. On Sunday the young ladies occupy pews in an artistic little Episcopal chapel, which was also built at Mr. Cooke's expense.

NOTICE.

To whom it may concern:

Certain persons who are supposed to be interested in other hotels at Manitou and Colorado Springs, have maliciously circulated the report that the Sunny Side hotel is closed for the season.

This is not the fact, but on the contrary, the Sunny Side House is doing a good business and will remain open for the fall and winter trade.

Now, the Sunny Side Hotel has never suffered in its business from the lies that are annually circulated in the fall about its being closed, but its owner and proprietor is getting tired of it, and I, W. H. Rogers, will punish to the full extent of the law, any person or persons who put in circulation lies or misstatements about me or my business, to my injury.
